A.Y. Rabbi Returns To Berlin For Year

An American citizen, Dr. Michael L. Munk, sailed on the Mauretania from New York to be the first rabbi of Berlin since before the war. He will not encourage Berlin's 7,500 surviving resident Jews to re-establish a permanent life in Germany.

Dr. Munk's assignment under the auspices of the Jewish Distribution committee, 270 Madison Avenue, is for an initial period of "about a year," he said at his home, 1566 Forty-sixth Street, Brooklyn.

"I do not think that there is any chance of reconciliation for the Berlin Jews with the Christian population," the forty-two-year-old rabbi declared. "It is hard for people whose next of kin were murdered to get on familiar terms with their Christian neighbours again."

A native of Berlin, Dr. Munk was a staunch defender of Jewish rights under the Hitler regime until he escaped with his wife and three small children in 1938. His father, Rabbi Ezra Munk, was chief rabbi of the Orthodox Jewish community, Adas Yisroel, in Berlin. Dr. Munk's granduncle, Rabbi Esriel Hildesheimer, founded Berlin's Hildesheimer rabbinical seminary.

Dr. Munk will live in American quarters in the German capital and expects to have access to all four of its occupation zones. His community will consist of Orthodox, Conservative and Reform survivors of greater Berlin's pre-war Jewish population of 270,000 most of the city's seven remaining synagogues are in the Russian [illegible]

Says Christians Fail Jews

The Jewish problem in Palestine is a Christian problem as well, the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Bridgeman, formerly Canon of St. George's Cathedral in Jerusalem, and now on the staff of Trinity Church, said in his sermon at Trinity, Broadway at Wall Street, New York.

"The fundamental problem is that of the position of the people of Jewish faith scattered about the world," he said. "It is just as much a Christian problem, for it is the problem caused by the failure of professing Christian people to find a just solution of the relations of Christians and Jews.

"We must recognize that while we of America loudly demand in the name of humanity that 100,000 Jews be admitted to reluctant, protesting Palestine, we, with a country 300 times as great... have in fact offered a refuge to but 6,000 in 1946. Not ony did we not modify our quota, but we did not even fill it. Our protestation of Christian sympathy is in fact but hypocrisy and our interest in Zionism seems but a veiled anti-Semitism."

Dr. Bridgeman said: "We ignore the real problem while we gaze fatuously at a small, far off country which we hope will take the problem of the Jews off our hands and spare us the trouble of behaving like Christians."

that "the memory of what took place in a century of civilization and culture should be kept alive."

"The children should never forget what the Christian population did to the Jews," Dr. Munk said. His own three [illegible]

Orthodox Rabbis Assail British Rule

The Rabbinical Council of America adopted at Detroit, Mich., a resolution calling upon the United States to exert its influence in the United Nations to safeguard Palestine as the last haven in the world for Jewry.

Representing about 150,000 lay members of "Modern Orthodox" Jewry in the United States, the council said that it was issuing its resolution "to the conscience of the world, at this critical moment when the United Nations Assembly meets to consider the destiny of the Holy Land and the fate of the surviving remnants of Jewry languishing in refugee centers and D. P. camps in Europe and Cyprus."

"In the name of God and humanity," the resolution said, "we call upon the United Nations Assembly to assert itself for the sake of the moral reconstruction of a war-ravaged world by taking immediate steps that will insure peace and justice in the Holy Land in opening the doors of Eretz Israel to the helpless survivors of martyred Israel."

The rabbis implored the United Nations, under the U.S. leadership, to make possible "the return of Jews to Palestine" not under the sufferance of a militarized mandatory power (Great Britain) but under the religious and historic rights rooted in the Bible and reaffirmed and assured to them by the nations of the world."

"We protest and condemn the illegal and inhumane action of Great Britain, in [illegible] persistent violation of the [illegible] protest against Britain's deliberate policy in stifling the economic development of the country which Jewish labor and heroic sacrifice is turning from a wasteland into a flourishing agricultural and industrial center of the Middle East."

Rabbi Oscar Z. Fasman, president of the Hebrew Theological College, Chicago, told a round table conference on Palestine that destiny had assigned to the United States the job of curbing "the viciousness of the totalitarian state and safeguarding the ideals of democracy in a struggling world."

"A choice must be made," he said, "between the interests of economic imperialists, to whom the profits of oil take precedence over the claims of decency, and the millions of American sons who may have to pay with their lives for an unforgivable blunder in protecting the lifeline of democracy at the far end of the Mediterranean."

Agency Aims Before U.N. Stated

The objectives of the Jewish Agency's representatives to the United Nations were outlined in a cablegram from New York read to correspondents in Jerusalem by an agency spokesman. They are:

To obtain Zionist representation in the Assembly.

If an inquiry committee is created, to assure that it be small and that Britons and Arabs be excluded from membership but Americans included.

If Britain and the Arabs are nevertheless represented, to obtain Zionist representation.

To assure that the committee's terms of reference mention Britain's obligations to Jews under the League of Nations mandate and what the agency called the pressing need for immigration to Palestine.

To make certain that the committee visits Palestine.

To guarantee the Zionist witnesses' appearance before the committee.

To influence the Assembly to obtain Britain's assurance that the United Nations' recommendations will be put into operation.

To obtain recommendations from the Assembly that Britain implement the mandate.

To prevent any United Nations expression of assent to Britain's present policy in Palestine.

To convince the United States that it cannot be neutral toward the settlement of the Palestine problem.

Head Of Bnai Brith Dies Presiding

Henry Monsky, fifty-seven, an Omaha, Neb., attorney who had been national president of the Bnai Brith for the last ten years, collapsed in New York and died at a meeting at the Hotel Biltmore, for the discussion of plans for the triennial convention of the fraternal organization in Washington this month.

Mr. Monsky, who was an organizer of the American-Jewish Conference and chairman of its interim committee, had come to New York for the Bnai Brith meeting and was stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

When he was seized with the attack Mr. Monsky was presiding at a meeting of the committee comprising the executive body of the conference. Mr. Monsky was speaking on the problem of Palestine and the current United Nations General Assembly session. His wife, Mrs. Daisy Monsky, who had come East with him when he left his home to attend the meeting, was summoned immediately.

He also leaves a son, Hubert, an ace in the American Air Forces in the recent war; three daughters, Mrs. Paul Grossman and Mrs. Lloyd Malashack, of Omaha, and Mrs. Barbara Turner, of San Francisco; and his mother, Mrs. Abraham Monsky of Omaha, who is 99 years old.

Bnai Brith, which, translated from the Hebrew, means "Sons of the Covenant," was organized in New York more than 100 years ago. It was the first Jewish fraternal and service order of its kind in the world.

Opposes Zionist Claim To Speak For All Jews

The request of the Jewish Agency for Palestine to be seated without a vote in all the United Nations Assembly's debates was opposed by the American Council for Judaism and the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation. In a letter to Secretary of State Marshall, Ralph Wolf, vice president of the council, said the only spokesman acceptable to the group as Americans of Jewish faith was the American delegation.

"We regard the claim of the Jewish Agency as a 'body representing the Jewish people,'" the letter said, "as one that effects most profoundly the fundamental position of Jews the whole world over whose status will be hurt by an action that tends to confuse their complete identity with the countries of which they are citizens and tend to identify them through the Jewish Agency as a political unit possessed of special political rights and corresponding responsibilities to a country other than the countries of which they are citizens."

Rabbi Elmer Berger, the council's executive director, said that its members felt that recognition of the agency as a spokesman for all Jews might jeopardize the status of millions of Jews all over the world.

"Basic to the Jewish Agency's declared purpose to set up a Jewish state is the concept of such a state as one to which Jews, citizens at the present time of other nations, could by virtue of being Jews

Wants Children Moved From Cyprus

An appeal to American parents to provide educational supplies for parentless, homeless children held in detention camps on Cyprus was made in New York by Mrs. David de Sola Pool, who returned from a visit to Palestine and Cyprus as a representative of Hadassah.

Mrs. Pool also called on Americans to "help persuade" the British Government to transfer the 1,500 children on Cyprus to Palestine so "we would not have the spectacle of children behind barbed wire."

"We cannot afford to lose any more time in normalizing the lives of these children," Mrs. Pool declared. "I do not see how their bodies and spirits can stand further frustrations and deeper disappointment in what we thought was the victory of civilization over barbarism."

During her week-long stay in Cyprus, Mrs. Pool said, it was apparent that the most serious problem was the psychological one of being able to do nothing, because of the lack of supplies. What is desired most urgently, she added, are textbooks, particularly Bibles, pencils and paper, as well as tools of all kinds for handicrafts.

A number of teachers are being sent to the island from Palestine, Mrs. Pool said. Another group of teachers is to go soon to organize leadership training courses for the adults.

Mrs. Pool said that the reception camp on Cyprus to which immigrants are first brought is an open

SABBATH IN THE MELON PATCH

By Eliezer Schmueli, Translated From The Hebrew By J. Green

It happened in the middle of the month of Tammus. The sun was sinking in the West, and with her last rays gilded the tops of the trees of the plantations surrounding the melon field. I awoke from a short [illegible] neighbours, who had but recently settled in the field not far from my house. I had to force my way through a barbed wire fence to reach the watchman's hut, which had been erected a few short hours ago.

When I came near to the flimsy structure, I stopped in my tracks in utter amazement at the scene that unfolded itself before my eyes. On a wooden box in the centre of the hut there stood two small metal candlesticks, with two lighted candles. The father and his five sons, dressed in their Sabbath clothes, stood with their faces to the east, prayer-books in their hands and sang aloud the Sabbath prayers. Behind them on a mat sat a woman with a child on her lap. She was whispering playfully into the child's ear.

I wished to withdraw and turned to leave, so that I would not disturb the praying nor the peace that enveloped the family. But all at once twelve pleading eyes swung on me and arrested my footsteps. My feet seemed to become rooted to the ground. Red with embarrassment, I stood with bowed head, listening to the voices of the prayers, which were carried on the wings of the evening wind through the fields, and whose echoes were returning from the dark woods.

Lechoh dodi likras kaloh . . .
Lechoh dodi likras kaloh . . .

I do not know whether it was due to my presence or because of the glory of the song, but the singing grew louder and louder from minute to minute. The father led and the children responded. The melon patch and the surrounding plantations echoed with hymn and song, the song of welcome to Queen Sabbath, descending from afar and spreading out her wings to cover all with a bluish veil.

"Shabbat Shalom! Welcome."

The prayer had ended and the father invited me to enter. On his face was a grin of curiosity.

"Shabbat Shalom, neighbour!" I cried out as I approached the hut.

"Will you please be seated," said the father, and pointed to the mat. Please forgive us, but we have neither stool nor paraffin tin for you to sit on."

I sat down on the mat and was immediately surrounded by the father and his children, who gazed at me with large, black, questioning eyes.

After a short pause, I asked:

"Whence do you come?"

[illegible] from the [illegible] Jerusalem," replied the children in unison.

"Were you born in Jerusalem?"

"No, we come from Persia," replied the father, with pride, "from Shushan Habirah."

"My father's name is Mordecai," cried out the eldest, and looked at his father proudly. "He is named after Mordecai the Righteous, and my mother's name is Esther, after Esther the Queen in the Megillah."

"And what is your name?"

"His name is Abraham," the father replied with a smile. "The second is Isaac and that one is Jacob, as our fathers were called, that one Benjamin and that one Joseph."

"And our little sister is called Rachel," cried out Abraham, and he pointed to the child that dozed in her mother's arms. "Just like our mother Rachel."

"Our mother Rachel," murmured the mother quietly and pressed the dozing child to her heart. "Rachel the Righteous."

"Have you been long in the land?"

"With the help of the Lord, two and a half years," replied the father, with a beaming face. "Two and a half years in the land of the Fathers."

"We came on foot, on the long journey through Mesopotamia and Syria to Safed."

"And you came here from Jerusalem?"

"So, it is the Lord's Will," replied the Persian with a sigh. "We did not wish to leave the Holy City, but He so decreed. I worked for two years in a quarry, but after Pesach a stone fell on my hand and injured it. I was laid up in the Hadassah hospital for two months, and I came out a cripple. I could no more do any heavy labour. Who was to feed my wife and children? Must I then go and beg in the streets? I was advised to go to the Sharon. There we could work in the vineyards and melon fields, and we would live and not perish."

"The owner of this field invited you from Jerusalem to become the watchmen of his field?"

"Invited!" The father burst out laughing. "How could he have invited me, when he did not even know me yesterday? All was arranged by Him who reigns on high. He smiteth and He healeth. To the suburb in which we dwelt in Jerusalem [illegible] driver, [illegible] And he replied, 'I am from Haifa.' I said to him, 'Do you pass through the Sharon.' And he replied, 'I shall pass through the Sharon.' And I entreated him to take me with him. And he said: 'Come early to-morrow morning and we shall be on our way'."

"That night we gathered our possessions. We took a little of this and a little of that. We went to the lorry and climbed on. When morning came, the driver arrived, saw the children and cried out: 'I saw one man and you have brought a whole family with you. Out with you and away!' I said: 'Surely you have not the heart of a Jew. You cannot be of the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Gentiles helped us on the long road between Persia and Eretz Israel, and you, a Jew, will have no mercy on your own kin.' The young man's heart was softened and he laughed. 'Cover yourself well with this tarpaulin, and do not show yourselves lest the police see you.'

"So we travelled and travelled until we reached this settlement.

'Jews, climb down,' he shouted to us and tugged at the tarpaulin. 'Have we reached the Sharon?' I asked.

'This is the Sharon.'

'Are Jews here?'

'All are Jews.'

'Blessed be the Lord. May you be rewarded with many mitzvot.'

"We descended with our goods and sat by the side of the road. It was Friday. The holy Sabbath was approaching. There was no roof to our heads, not a penny in our pockets. The sun was shining and the heat increasing — no bread for the children and not even a drop of water for the infant.

"The children began to cry and my Esther said: 'Jews are sons of the merciful. We are not in Sodom. I shall go to the houses and ask for help, so that we may not desecrate the Sabbath.' I told her that we would rather turn the Sabbath into a week-day than beg for charity. In Shushan I had earned my livelihood honourably, and I refused to become a beggar. If it was so decreed we shall accept our fate, but we shall not sin."

"It was midday and the sun beat down on us without mercy. The children cried and the baby's screams rent the heavens. It tore my heart. The Sabbath was coming. We had no roof to our heads and not a penny in our pockets. I [illegible] forty years we have lived amongst the Gentiles and we honoured thy Sabbath with food and drink. Here in Eretz Yisrael, where thy Schechinah rests, must our Sabbath be turned into a Tish'ah b'ab? If not for my sake, consider the children, who have never committed a single sin'."

"At that moment there came to us a Jew and in his hands were a loaf of bread and a jug of water. Surely, the Lord had heard my prayer and had sent to us Elijah the Tishbite. I said to him: 'Your portion will be of the Garden of Eden, because you have brought life to starving children. The water we shall take, but the bread we shall not touch.'

'What!' he cried, 'will you rob of a Mitzvah?'

"I said to him: 'Give me work and you will not need to offer me charity.'

He asked me: 'What work can you do?'

"And I answered him: 'Picking grapes and guarding melon fields.'

'Can you guard melon fields?' he asked me.

"And I answered: 'With the help of the Lord.'

'Are you not afraid of thieves?'

'The Lord is the Guardian of Israel.'

"Then he cried out: 'You have been sent from the heavens, for I have a melon field and I need a watchman.'

"And I replied: 'Behold, I shall guard your field for you.'

"He asked me: 'What wages do you want?'

"I said: 'What is a pound between us? Only let us not desecrate the Sabbath.' The man took a few coins from his pocket and handed them to me. He said: 'Here is money for your Sabbath. Take up your bundles, and I will lead you to the field.'

"And this man, this Elijah, brought us planks and tins, an axe and a saw, and we erected a Succah in the midst of the melons. My Esther prepared a fire and cooked food for the Sabbath. We brought candles and prepared the two Sabbath loaves. We put on our Sabbath clothes. We rose up and welcomed the coming of the Sabbath

Studies Nursing For Work In Poland

A Polish student nurse won a year's scholarship in England late in 1938. Before the year was up, Poland was invaded by the Nazis, and she was detained in England She thus escaped the fate of her family which has disappeared without trace.

And now, on another scholarship, this one provided by the National Council of Jewish Women, Miss Rachela Hutner, 39-year-old native of Warsaw, has come to America for a year's post-graduate work at the College of Nursing, Wayne University, at Detroit, Mich. Miss Hutner, who arrived by plane at New York, is already enrolled at the university, for the study of hospital organization and public health service. Later, she will return to Poland to train nurses needed by the Jewish community in Warsaw.

Before coming to England in 1938, Miss Hutner had completed more than two years' training at the School of Nursing in Warsaw, and had served for a year at the city's Jewish Hospital. Prevented from returning to Poland in 1939, she enrolled for a three-year training course to qualify as an English State Registered Nurse. It was while engaged in nursing at St. James' Hospital, London, that Miss Hutner applied for the scholarship, the sixth granted by the National Council of Jewish Women. By the end of 1947, the organization plans to have 14 more European students in training at American universities.

Previous scholarship recipients, students from France, Greece, Holland, and Tunisia, are now training for welfare work at Columbia, Chicago, Minnesota, and Tulane Universities, and at the University of California at Berkeley. Upon the completion of their studies, all will return to aid in the social reconstruction of their own countries.

HOSPITALITY THAT PAYS OFF

Each year thousands of tourists travel throughout Canada. Impressed with our hospitality, and with the excellence of Canadian products, their goodwill and satisfaction are powerful factors in expanding the potential markets for our goods and adding lustre to Canada's name.

The development of new services, providing more pleasure for these guests, creating favorable opinion, depends upon the initiative and imagination of Canadian youth. To these developers, they promise great returns.

The tourist industry is but one of many fields offering a challenge to opportunity-seeking Canadians. Nowhere else in the world are there greater certainties of rich rewards for well-planned and well-directed effort than in the New Horizons of Canada Unlimited.

MOURN WARSAW GHETTO MARTYRS

Five thousand Jews from all parts of Poland attended a memorial service at Warsaw for those who died in uprisings against the Nazis in the city's ghetto.

Many wept as speakers recalled how the Germans wiped out approximately 700,000 Jews and levelled the ghetto to rubble four years ago.

Representatives of Jewish organizations in the United States, France, Palestine and Argentina heard Dr. Adolf Berman, president of the Central Committee of Polish Jews, warn:

"Our war is not yet over. There still is a battle to be won against reactionaries. Poles and Jews shall fight together for peace in the world and the Jews, in their fight for independence, expect help from the Polish democracy and people."

Refugees To Be Seventh Generation Rabbis

The joyous confusion of a family reunited filled a small flat on the Lower East Side of New York as Grand Rabbi Samuel Goettesman welcomed to their new home the wife and three sons he had left ten years ago in Poland.

Relatives and members of the rabbi's congregation, Ohelv Israel, at 65 East Third Street, just down the street from the flat, at No. 44, helped make the reunion a noisy, happy, tearful affair. Glasses of tea were on the table, along with cookies, plain cake and a bowl of walnuts, and there was wine and Scotch for those whose taste went that way.

When the quiet exchange of happy glances had succeeded embraces and exclamations, the sons, Israel, twenty, Aaron, eighteen, and Abraham, thirteen, and their mother, Rachela, forty-five, told once again of their war-time wanderings and the ten years' wait to come to America, which ended when the emergency passenger ship Ernie Pyle docked.

The Pyle, from Bremerhaven and Plymouth, brought 851 passengers, 775 of whom were immigrants of various faiths and nationalities. For 183 of these, including the Goettesmans, the United Service for New Americans, whose work is supported by the United Jewish Appeal, made their entry possible by providing its corporate affidavit as the basis for visas.

"This is like a dream," said Mrs. Goettesman, gazing around her new home. Her words were almost drowned out by relatives and friends eager to interpret for reporters. Israel and Aaron, who learned English in a Siberian night school, told of the war travels of the temporarily fatherless family.

When the Germans invaded Poland, the Goettesmans fled their home at Borszczow to Russia. There, when they declined Soviet citizenship, they were sent to Yakutsk, Siberia, where the two oldest boys were put to work mining gold. They showed snapshots of a bleak, snowbound settlement and of primitive strip mining with horse-drawn, wooden plows.

After three years in Siberia, in 1943 the family was sent to Saratov, on the Volga, and eventually, they made their way across Poland to a displaced persons camp in Germany. Then their journey to the United States began.

Rabbi Goettesman, who was wearing a "kolpek", a fur shako, in honor of the occasion, had a tale of travels to match his family's. He had left home in 1937 to lecture at a synagogue in London and, anxious to get himself and his family away from Poland, he travelled on to the United States. After visiting in New York, the rabbi went to Havana and then re-entered the U.S. under the quota six years ago.

A sixth-generation rabbi, and, he says, a direct descendant of Baal Shem Tov, founder of Hassidism, a religious movement started among the Jews of Eastern Europe in the eighteenth century, Rabbi Goettesman was making plans for his sons in the new world.

"This one," he said, putting his hand on Aaron, "has not the inclination. Some other following for him." He moved his hand to Israel and placed his other hand on Abraham. "These two," he told the New York Herald Tribune, "they will be the seventh generation rabbis in our new country."

Hebrew Poet Continues Shylock Research

Ari Ibn-Zahav, Hebrew poet and novelist and first winner of the Jerusalem literature award, arrived in New York from Palestine to continue his work of removing the "disturbing mark on Jewry left by Shakespeare in the 'Merchant of Venice'."

Seated in the living room of the home of Maurice Schwartz, Jewish actor, playwright and producer, at 26 East Tenth Street, the short, dynamic writer who says he sleeps only three hours a day, told of his five years' research into the historical background of Shylock and Venetians in the sixteenth century.

The poet, who resigned in 1946 as academic registrar of the University of Jerusalem but holds the position of honorary manager of the University Press, pointed out that the bard's Shylock was an imaginary character and used theatrically to please the patrons of the day.

Historically, Ibn-Zahav said, Shylock was an embittered leader of the Ghetto who resented the government's inquisition against his people.

After completing his research Ibn-Zahav wrote in Hebrew the historical novel, "Shylock, Jew of Venice." It has been translated into English. Mr. Schwartz said he read the book and felt it could right a centuries-old wrong. He is finishing a play based on the book and in collaboration with Ibn-Zahav.

Grove Honors Dutch Hero

A grove in Palestine in honor of Joop Westerweel, a non-Jewish hero of the European underground who saved hundreds of Jewish children from the Nazis, was dedicated by the survivors of Dutch Jewry near the Even Ochberg settlement in the hills of Menasseh.

Joop Westerweel was a noted Netherlands educator who, soon after the outbreak of the war, organized the rescue of Jewish children. He secretly removed all the children from the Loozdecht Children's House and distributed them among friendly Christian families. While conducting a group of 70 German Jewish children through Belgium and France, with Palestine as their ultimate goal, Westerweel was captured by the Nazis and, after five months imprisonment, was shot by them in August, 1944.

The dedication ceremony was conducted by the Dutch Consul and by some of the fifty surviving members of the Dutch Hechalutz organization, who are now living at Even Yitzchak.

MEAT KNISHES

Dough: Place one-third pound shortening in mixing bowl. Add one-half cup boiling water, and begin blending. Sift together two cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, three-quarter teaspoons salt, and add to above mixture. Mix well. This forms a soft (almost moist) dough. Place in refrigerator for at least half an hour before using.

Filling Using Raw Meat — Fry two finely cut onions in four tablespoons chicken fat, or shortening, until brown. Mix one pound raw hamburger meat into the onions, and continue frying for five minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste. Remove from fire, and cool slightly. Add two eggs, and mix well.

Using Left-over Cooked Meat — Fry onions as above, until brown. Add them to the left-over meat which has been put through meat grinder. Add the two eggs, salt and pepper, and mix well.

Roll out the dough as for pie-crust, and place the meat on top of dough. Roll the whole like a jelly roll, and cut roll into two-inch slices. Shape each slice into a knish, by pulling the dough to cover meat, as much as possible. Place on greased cookie sheet, and bake in 375-degree oven until golden brown.

Mrs. R. Heller,
154 Chiltern Hill Road, Toronto.

GEFILTE FISH

Chop together, finely, about five pounds of carp, dore and whitefish, mixed. Add two or three unbeaten eggs, and enough matzoh meal to thicken, using at least one teaspoonful of meal. In an aluminum cooking pot, place four big onions; cut-up carrots and celery, for flavor; and one teaspoon salt; and if desired, some sugar. Place gefilte fish balls in the cooking-pot, cover with water, and bring to a boil. Cover the pot, and boil gently for two, or two and one-half hours. This serves four.

Queen with hearts full of praise and thankfulness to the Guardian of Israel."

Night came and enveloped the melon patch in darkness. Above the ramshackle hut stars appeared, great, shining, peaceful Sabbath stars.

Peace Of Mind

For over twenty-seven weeks now the book, "Peace of Mind" by our friend and distinguished colleague, Dr. Joshua Liebman, of Boston, has come to occupy the first place among non-fiction best sellers. This volume has had an astounding sale, indeed, primarily because it answers a great need in helping men and women who are living in an hour of crisis to get more out of life. Dr. Liebman in his work blends the great truths of religion with the most helpful insights of psychology in guiding people to understand themselves.

Now, there are three central influences in life. These are religion, science, and psychology. There is no doubt that modern science as an offspring of the Renaissance has revolutionized life. In particular, the advance of scientific knowledge and its application during the last one hundred years must cause every thinking individual to bow in reverence. The triumphs of science in medicine, in particular, should make us more than grateful. Disease after disease has now been conquered. But the trouble with science is that it is both angel and devil. Even as it has been used for construction, so it has also been used for destruction. Science has no ethic. That it must derive from religion.

Now the youngest branch of science is psychology with its own branches of psycho-analysis and psychiatry. Psychology bids us to look inward and we are grateful to men such as Sigmund Freud, the "Columbus of the mind," and his disciples who have charted for us the workings of mind and spirit and have thus helped us to know ourselves. But while psychology turns us inward there is the danger that the "self" may be over-emphasized and cooperation between individuals neglected.

Hence, religion, which deals with the inner self and the outer world and preaches brotherhood between souls and that of communion between the individual soul and God, is the greatest factor in all of life. Thus one of the outstanding psychologists of our day, Dr. Henry Link, in his book "The Return To Religion", maintains out of an experience of twenty years that psychology can help sanify the people who are religious in the rebuilding of life. For the religious person has still his greatest assurance, most helpful factors in regaining stability when a mental breakdown occurs.

While Dr. Link as a psychiatrist advocates that men and women go to church and synagogue, Rabbi Liebman advocates that religious people gladly should employ the techniques of modern psychology and thus be aided in gaining balance in an unbalanced world. For, maintains Rabbi Liebman, we can not truly have a stable social world unless first the individual is at peace. As long as the individual knows no security emotionally, social security is impossible.

He formulates the title of the book, Peace of Mind, out of a personal experience. In his youth he drew up a catalogue of earthly desirables. Among these were: health, love, beauty, talent, riches, and fame. He submitted this list to a revered Jewish teacher who drew a line through all these indicating that while these desirables were important, he nevertheless omitted the most important thing in life, namely that of Peace of Mind.

The book consists of eleven chapters. The first bears the title, "Questing Inward." Here the author calls upon us to realize that we are multiples in personality; that we are subject to various moods, that we must learn to discipline our primitive drives and impulses. In the chapter on "Conscience" we are urged to guard against repression of emotions, and the need for verbalization to clear our minds from images that do not make for mental health.

Dr. Liebman advocates that the individual love himself, that is, respect his own personality. Of course this does not mean narcissism which is rooted in the worship of self only and hence is a false love of self. Too many individuals are guilty of self-hatred and hence destroy themselves by their own agression. Often, children rejected by parents, come to be victims of all sorts of complexes and are victims of self-hate.

In discussing "Fear" we are given the import of desirable fear which makes for safety in the face of danger. Fear is an essential to life. But the neurotic fears are the ones against which we must employ all the techniques of psychology and religion in order that we have peace of mind. Thus, if we are in an African jungle it is but natural to fear snakes. But when we are in the parlor of our home and we imagine that there are snakes under the carpet, that of course indicates that we are victims of neurosis.

I am of the opinion that the finest chapter in Peace of Mind is the one dealing with "grief". All of us are members of the community of tears. Where is the individual who is without sorrow and disappointment? When sorrow comes it is essential that we express our grief and not repress it. Religion generally and our Judaism in particular have given us religious ceremonial devices by which to ease the pain of separation when death removes a loved one. Hence the sacred institutes of mourning so helpful in the hour of bereavement.

The mourner, however, must seek replacement for the loved one in new comradeships, although actually no such replacement can fill the void created by a dear one who has left this earthly scene. We as mature persons must guard against self-pity when death comes to one of our beloved. We must see death as the end only of a chapter in the book of life.

We are grateful to the author for showing evidence that many of the atheists are but results of homes where they experienced lovelessness. A cruel father who gave not his son the bread of love conditioned him to deny the loving fatherhood of God. But God is, and all nature resounds with affirmation of God. And even as we cannot define individual personality, so the finite mind can not truly define the Infinite. But the universe is friendly and we must in Jewish thought consider ourselves as partners with God, laboring and struggling with Him in order to perfect the world and ourselves.

There is intelligence and purpose to life. We must emphasize the essential goodness of life and learn to imitate the heroes of history who have set examples for us all in brave and noble living. We above all must seek the way to God's presence by freeing ourselves of distortions and commune with God, the source of truth and the giver of peace.

There is no doubt that Rabbi Liebman has given us a most helpful book and we rejoice that multitudes of the perplexed in a perplexed world will benefit by its guidance and be helped in maintaining a balanced life. [illegible] now living and deepen the insights of psychology. [illegible] phetic religion must make us restless, filled with divine discontent. Only when religion is an opiate there is the danger of having that peace of mind which spells indifference to the agonies of mankind.

Certainly as a Jew and a Jewish teacher viewing the tragedy of my people at the present, how can I indulge in even wishing for peace for myself? As a Jew, too, I am sensitive to the sufferings of all peoples who are among the down-trodden and the enslaved. I seek, of course, strength and courage from religion and psychic insight and philosophy that I may continue to be strong in the battle for social security upon which individual peace does depend. Hence mine is a restlessness with the world in which I live, and mine is the joy of divine discontent.

automatically go if they so wished," he said. "Such a presumption implies special relationship of all Jews to a Jewish state, regardless of their individual citizenships.

"It threatens therefore to have a deleterious effect upon the present political status of Jews in countries and infringes upon the sovereign rights of the countries of which they are citizens."

The Hebrew Committee of National Liberation, headed by Peter H. Bergson, pressed for recognition of an independent "Hebrew national state" and asked to be heard by the Assembly. Its spokesmen said the agency included nationals of many countries, owing allegiance to their respective Governments, "among them the Government of Great Britain. It is inconceivable," the committee's statement said, "that British subjects could represent the Hebrew people in a conflict with the Government of Great Britain."

The committee charged that the Jewish Agency and its subsidiaries had been "collaborating with the British occupants in Palestine and up to a certain time they have actively helped the occupation forces in their efforts to liquidate the active Hebrew resistance in Palestine."

All those held on Cyprus have a "fantastic" love of agriculture, and have scratched out little plots in the arid ground, she said.

In her capacity as chairman of the American Mother's Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation, Mrs. Pool announced that Mrs. Fred G. Murray, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, named the American Mother of 1947, will receive a medal at a ceremony in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on May 9. She also announced that the committee will sponsor a forum on the American family next fall, to be attended by all the past national mothers and social workers and community leaders. The forum will attempt to map a program for the strengthening of home and family life.

Dr. Munk has little forgiveness, in his heart for the Germans. "I believe that the whole population is guilty except for the youngsters who were born into the Nazi movement," he said. "They all knew what was going on."

ORTHODOX RABBIS

Rabbi Bernard Lander, associate director of the Mayor's committee on unity in New York City, stressed the importance of religious education in obtaining the survival of American Jewry.

The greatest danger threatening Jewry today, Rabbi Lander said, was not anti-Semitism or bigotry but a religious indifference and apathy.

Rabbi Uri Miller, president of the Council, asserted that the secularization of Jewish life in America had become "a cancerous growth on the body of the Jewish community, which is eating away the vitals of American Jewry."

"The American Jewish community will not retain the respect it enjoys," he added, "unless it merits that respect by continuing in the tradition of a religious community."

Rabbi Miller assailed what he called "ambulance chasers" among non-orthodox groups, whom he accused of discarding ethics in an effort to win away members of the rabbinical council.

"Obviously, this is unethical to the highest degree and from organizations which presumably represent Jewish ideals, is scandalous," he said.

Eddie started his job today!

THE MANAGER of the furniture factory in Eddie's town landed a big order. It meant he had to buy a lot of extra lumber, increase his payroll.

He lost no time in putting the whole thing up to the manager of his local bank. Together they worked out how much money he would need to take care of wages and other costs until he delivered the goods. Then, with the backing of his bank, he got to work on the order.

... And that's where Eddie came in. He was put on the payroll—given his first chance to learn a trade. Right now he's on his way home to tell Mom and Dad how much he likes his new job.
